DAYANANDA SAGAR UNIVERSITY

NAAC A+ GRADE

3.3.2 Health Outreach Programmes

The institution conducts various outreach programmes and community-based initiatives to promote health, hygiene, nutrition, and overall well-being among the local community. These programmes include health awareness campaigns, medical and health screening camps, hygiene and sanitation awareness, nutrition and balanced diet programmes, family planning and maternal health awareness, and preventive healthcare initiatives. The institution also promotes physical fitness, sports, regular exercise, mental well-being, healthy lifestyle practices, and awareness on communicable and non-communicable diseases.

The institution actively engages with underserved and vulnerable sections of the community through awareness programmes, health camps, counselling sessions, and community development activities. Where applicable, outreach initiatives may also support displaced or refugee communities in the local area. These programmes are conducted in collaboration with healthcare professionals, community organizations, government agencies, and other stakeholders, with the aim of improving access to health information and services, encouraging preventive healthcare practices, and contributing to the overall physical, mental, and social well-being of the community.
