Dear Arun Balodi,

You are invited to review paper #351 in 3rd International Conference on the Paradigm Shifts in Communication, Embedded Systems, Machine Learning and Signal Processing by Chair.

Title:

Gesture prediction using Surface-EMG signals

Abstract:

Gesture prediction is crucial for enhancing human-computer interaction by enabling intuitive and natural control methods, reducing reliance on traditional input devices. It significantly improves accessibility for individuals with physical disabilities, providing alternative means of communication and control. Additionally, it has broad applications in fields like robotics, virtual reality, and prosthetics, enhancing the functionality and user experience of these technologies. In this study, we have built Electromyogram signals-based gesture recognition. The dataset is pre-processed and compared using sliding window versus sliding window and Fourier transform. Further fed into various models to build an accurate model for gesture recognition.

Review due on:

8/16/2024
